PRIVACY NOTICE - CLIENT DATA (ORGANISATIONS)

Overview

- We will only collect and process the right amount of your personal data from you for the specific purposes that we need it.
- We only use your personal data for clearly defined purposes and have identified the legal basis for the processing activity.
- The service we provide means we do need to share your personal data.
- We endeavour to keep your personal data safe and secure at all times
- We may have to transfer your personal data outside of the UK and EU.
- We only keep your personal data for a set period of time.
- You can keep in control of your personal data through the various rights you have.
- We are happy to speak to you about what we do with your personal data.

Personal data collected

For us to find the most suitable candidates for your organisation we need to collect and use certain information about you, or individuals who work at your organisation. We don't need to collect too much from you, but what we do need is:

- Your organisation name and contact details (address, central telephone number, etc);
- Contact details of the individual we are liaising with at your organisation (name, telephone number, email address);
- Details of the job vacancy and type of candidate you require; and
- Any other information an individual from your organisation chooses to tell us.

Usually we collect this personal data directly from you, however we do sometimes collect some of this from other sources.

By using our website and sending any email communications our systems may obtain your IP address.

Collecting the data directly from you

You may provide your personal data to us via one of the following ways:

- Contacting us directly to discuss your vacancy requirements (usually by phone or email);
- Submitting a vacancy via the client services area of our website; or
- If you are a current/previous client when we have contacted you directly (usually by phone or email).

Collecting the data from other sources

We may gather some of your personal data, such as name and contact details, from publicly available sources online. For example, professional networking sites, such as LinkedIn, or job boards if you are advertising a vacancy.

What we use your personal data for and the legal basis we rely on

We collect and use your personal data for the following purposes:

Recruitment purposes:

To identify suitable candidates for the job vacancy you have and to ensure the contractual arrangement between our two organisations operates effectively.

We rely on the following legal basis for this:

- Contractual obligation – Article 6(1)(b) of GDPR

Marketing purposes:

As an existing client to re-contact you in the future to see if you have any new job vacancies to fill or to send anonymised candidate profiles of individuals who we think may be suitable for your organisation.

As a prospective client to contact you to discuss any potential job vacancies you may have or to send anonymised candidate profiles of individuals who we think may be suitable for your organisation.

MACKINNON BRUCE

INTERNATIONAL

We rely on the following legal basis for this:

- Legitimate Interests - Article 6(1)(f) of GDPR

We don't think it unreasonable for clients, both prospective and existing/lapsed, to want to know about our services and how we can help recruit the right person for your job vacancy or for you to know of any potential candidates that we feel may make suitable employees of your organisation. In fact, it can benefit your organisation to know when a highly skilled executive level individual is looking for new employment opportunities.

You can always opt out of any of our marketing communications at any time by clicking the unsubscribe button or contacting our Data Protection Manager.

Who we will share your personal data with

We will only share relevant and necessary personal data of our clients with the individual who you would like to invite for interview.

When we set up a new recruitment business for one of our top performing managers, the manager will take a copy of their client database they built up whilst working for Mackinnon Bruce International. The new business is still owned and controlled in the majority by Mackinnon Bruce International.

Your personal data may be accessed and seen by our third-party outsourced IT provider, whilst they undertake work on our behalf. We have a data processor contract in place which sets out both parties responsibilities and obligations under GDPR.

If you enter personal data into our website then it may be accessed and seen by our third-party website host and web data storage provider, whilst they undertake work on our behalf. We have a data processor contract in place which sets out both parties responsibilities and obligations under GDPR.

How we keep your personal data safe

Mackinnon Bruce International take the security of your personal data seriously and we have put in place the most appropriate organisational and technical measures to safeguard personal data. Our measures include:

- Encrypting devices and servers where appropriate
- Password access to computers and mobile devices
- Secure premises
- Restricting access to those staff who need to see the information
- Internal policies and procedures on data protection and information security
- Staff training

When we use third-party providers to process and/or store personal data we undertake relevant assessments of their business to establish their level of compliance with GDPR and only use those that provide sufficient guarantees to implement appropriate technical and organisational measures to safeguard personal data.

Our website, emails, databases and data storage are all on servers based in the UK and EU.

If you suspect your personal data has been lost or misused, please contact our Data Protection Manager.

Transferring personal data outside of the UK and EU

If a candidate, who is located outside of the UK and EU, applies for your job vacancy we will need to provide them with some of your data in relation to that job. This means that we sometimes must transfer client personal data to a third country.

If there is no adequacy decision in place for the country we are transferring client data to, we will only transfer the personal data if:

- the transfer is necessary for the conclusion or performance of a contract between ourselves (i.e. we are contracted to find a suitable candidate for the job vacancy you have); or we have obtained your permission to transfer your personal data.

How long we will keep your personal data for

We keep client data for as long as we have an active communication with you, and once this ceases we will keep your personal data for 10 years before it is deleted from our systems/securely destroyed.

We have documented retention periods for all the information we obtain and process.

Your rights

Unless you are a sole trader or in certain cases a partnership, it will be the individuals who work for our clients that have various rights in relation to how we process their personal data. Individuals can:

- access the personal data we keep about them and be given specific information about the processing.
- ask us to update inaccurate personal data we hold about them.
- ask us to delete their personal data but only when specific grounds apply.
- ask us to restrict the processing of their personal data, for example if they are contesting the accuracy of it.
- object to the processing of their personal data if they do not agree with our legitimate interest grounds and for direct marketing purposes.
- transfer personal data from us to another service provider but only when certain grounds apply.

If you would like to:

- object to the processing of your personal data (where we have relied on legitimate interests as our legal basis for the processing);

MACKINNON BRUCE INTERNATIONAL

- or to unsubscribe from future marketing communications please contact our Data Protection Manager.

We would really appreciate it if you would let us know if any of your personal data changes so that we can keep our records up to date and accurate.

We do not undertake any automated decision-making, including profiling.

Should you wish to exercise any of your rights please contact our Data Protection Manager.

If you are not happy with how we have been processing your personal data or have not dealt with one of your rights correctly when you have asked us to you may lodge a complaint with the Information Commissioners Office (ICO). The ICO has several ways in which you can get in touch with them, including post, email, and online forms. To find out how click here.
